I visited the Clyde Campus building site for the two new schools on Hawick Street, Yoker. After speaking with City Buildings building contractors Michael Cunningham and Martin Bredin, I was delighted to hear that the building was ahead of schedule, the site was being meticulously looked after and that City Building was trying to address the residents’ concerns on parking. The schools are planning to be finished in September next year.

I strongly support Scottish journalism and better media. I have been actively supporting the National Union of Journalists in their longstanding campaign for more resources and increased staffing at BBC Scotland. Recently, I met with some of Scotland’s best future journalists at Clyde College on the Anniesland Campus for a question and answer session about my personal political journey and the Scottish Government’s work to support Scottish journalism.

Tough Construction is expanding its operations from Anniesland to Drumchapel to help future-proof the company and protect local jobs. The company is a living wage employer, a proud supporter of apprenticeships, and would like this program to expand as well.

I co-sponsored an event at Parliament with the Scottish Ahlul Bayt Society (SABS), which works towards greater co-operation and understanding between different faith and culture groups to promote social cohesion and integration in Scotland. The event drew in over 300 guests from around the world, and included religious organisations and guest speakers such as the First Minister Nicola Surgeon, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland Dr Angus Morrison, and leading Shia Imam Sayed Ali Abbas Razawi. Other guests in attendance included the NHS, the Armed Forces, the Police, Fire and Health Services, most European consulates, and also the Chinese consulate and American consulate.

Contact me at my Constituency Office (please note that, due to election protocol, I cannot take any new cases after the Scottish Parliament dissolves on March 23). Please see over for further details.
